National Journal Indexes

The following indexes are a cumulative summary of Volume I, Numbers 1-9 of the National Journal.

National Journal cumulative indexes are published monthly. This supplement replaces the previous index which covered Numbers 1-5 of the National Journal.

Major studies and analyses are indicated in these indexes by bold face type.

Information may be located in four ways:

- By general subject, including federal government agencies, program names and all court cases cited in the National Journal. The subject index is subdivided and cross-referenced. The subject index begins on the facing page.
- By private organizations, including associations, law firms, lobby groups, trade organizations, corporations and universities whose activities are covered by the National Journal. The organizations index begins on p. 10.
- By personal names, including public officials and private individuals whose activities are referred to in the National Journal. Generally excluded from this listing are deceased persons, historical figures, foreigners and authors of articles cited in "In the media" listings in the National Journal. The personal names index begins on p. 16.
- By geographical areas, including states, cities, congressional districts, foreign countries and other geographical place names. The geographical index begins on p. 26.

Index—Subjects

This index covers general subjects, federal agencies and court cases referred to in Vol. I, Numbers 1-9 of the National Journal. In general, federal agency citations refer to major personnel changes, reorganizations and funding actions by Congress. All major analyses are indicated by bold face type.

Center For Political Research

The Center for Political Research is a privately owned, non-partisan organization established to monitor, analyze and report the activities of the federal government on all levels, with emphasis upon the government decision-making process. The mass of information generated by and about the federal government is systematized and indexed for ready retrieval. The files are computer-coded and constantly updated to insure that relevant information is accessible to clients when needed.

The CPR Research Services Division responds to client requests for information or undertakes research, on an as-needed or ongoing basis. Through this Division, clients have access to the computerized data files on government and to the expertise of 45 Washington journalists and specialists. Upon request this Division will provide factual information from the files, prepare studies and evaluations enlarging upon the filed information or continually update a client on developments affecting any subject in which the client has particular interests or concerns.

National Journal, the weekly publication of CPR, reports major actions of each executive department and agency, the Congress and the Supreme Court. It provides a checklist of all current developments including media comment thereon. Major developments are analyzed to determine the impact upon the government process. All materials in National Journal are organized for research purposes. The format corresponds to the government structure. The contents of each issue are indexed five ways: by programs and products, personal name, private organization, geography and subject matter. Cumulative indexes are supplied monthly.

CPR is unaffiliated. National Journal is available only through subscription.
